FARMER KILLS GIRL IN STRUGGLE WHICH FOLLOWS QUARREL*George W. Jackson Is Jailed
for Murder of Hannah
Jackson.*SAY HE REFUSED TO MARRY HER

According to Story of Youth Who Saw the Shooting, Girl Attacked the Man With a Stone. He Used Her Weapon, Single Shot, Firing Fatal.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, Oct. 8.—(George W. Struble, the farmer living near McClellandtown now in jail charged with the murder of Hannah Jackson, 21 years old, in front of his home yesterday, has retained counsel to combat the accusation against him. He declines to talk of the killing, which took place in "Dark Hollow," on the road between McClellandtown and McClellandtown, last evening.

The only witnesses to the shooting were Byron Hostetter, 18 years old, and an infant. According to Hostetter, Struble and the Jackson girl had quarreled. They were returning from McClellandtown, where Struble had been the girl and baby, the latter being ill. In front of Struble's home, the farmer declared he would leave the girl, and that Hostetter could drive her home, returning with the girl later. Prior to this, it is said, he had refused the girl's suggestion of marriage.

Angered by his action, it is said the Jackson girl jumped out of the bushes, still holding the baby in one arm, and picked up a stone and hurled it at the farmer. Knowing she carried a revolver, he is said to have snatched it from the hand of the girl and fired. In the struggle, a shot was fired. It struck the girl above the eye, inflicting a fatal wound.

Struble then went into his home with the baby and called a doctor. Drs. Sangston and Cloud responded. The girl died two hours later. Struble surrendered to justice of the Peace S. F. Guy and was brought to the Uniontown jail.

Miss Jackson was the daughter of Mrs. Alphonso Jackson. She has a number of relatives who are well known throughout the county. Struble is about 34 years old and a widower. He is a half-brother of S. L. Dulkes, who was shot by young Jim Nutt in the famous Nutt-Dulkes tragedy of 30 years ago.

"WHAT IS THE SALE?"
WOMAN INQUIRES; SHE IS NO BASEBALL FAN.

At least one woman in town did not know the world's series was on yesterday. She mistook the stentorian tones of Sam Flood for those of an auctioneer.

As the woman came down Main street, Sam was using his megaphone to best advantage. She paused, looked puzzled and then turned to a bystander. "Would you please tell me what they are selling?" she asked.

FRICK BARN BURNS; THIRD DESTROYED IN A MONTH

Big Building at Bessemer Destroyed With a Loss to Company of $15,000.

The Frick steel barn at Bessemer burned down last evening about 9 o'clock. There were many automobiles up from Scottsdale and down from Mount Pleasant where the glare of the fire was plainly to be seen. The Frick automobiles took the chemical engine and a large detachment of the firemen from Scottsdale, but the barn was too far gone to be saved. A large quantity of hay and grain was destroyed, but the stock was saved, 13 mules and three horses getting out.

The barn on the same site burned down last December, and this one replaced it. The barn at McClelland burned down a few days ago. One of Deaths burned about a month ago. William Hittner had passed the barn 10 minutes before and saw the mules eating away and every thing looking all right. The origin of the fire is unknown. It started in the left end and was blazing furiously at once. The barn was 50x80 feet and 10 feet high. Loss $15,000.

ROBBERS ON ARCH STREET

This Time They Ransacked a Home in the Suburban Addition.

Burglars pried open a cellar window at the home of Mrs. Lillian M. Hall on South Arch street some time last night or this morning and stole a large quantity of valuables, in $4 in money. The burglary was not discovered until this morning when practically all of the provisions the family had in the house were found to be gone. They used the clothes basket to remove the goods. Two pocket-books containing about $2 in cash were also filled and then thrown about the floor. From the appearance of the downstairs rooms the intruders must have taken their time and gone over the place thoroughly.

Articles for which they had no use were thrown about in great confusion. A bolt pried loose from the cellar door disclosed the burglar's means of effecting an entrance.

World's Series Scene Shifts to Philadelphia Today

SCENE DURING WORLD'S SERIES GAME AT PHILADELPHIA.

By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—It was Philadelphia's turn today to play the Giants. McGraw wanted today's game and he must get today's or he up against a heavy disadvantage tomorrow, so he is practically certain that Mathewson will be called upon to do the pitching.

Plank was looked upon as the probable choice of Mack, though it is not at all improbable that "Bullet" Joe Bush, the Athletics' speed marvel, may be started because of the advantage he would have on an overcast day. This is his first appearance in a world's series but he does not appear to be a bit worried at the outlook.

Frank Merkle, first baseman of the Giants who injured his ankle in yesterday's game, will not be able to play in today's game. He was hardly able to stand upon it today.

The Giants appeared at 1 o'clock. Snodgrass, whose "charley-horse" has eased up, was considered a possible successor to Merkle at first.

Walter Johnson, who paraded the field in a new automobile received because he was adjudged to be the most valuable player to his team in the American League, received a generous share of the applause.

Mathewson and Plank were expected to oppose each other, and in preparation, the Giants batted against Schupp, a left hander, and the Athletics against Wyckoff, a right hand pitcher.

The 14 cars which left here shortly after 9:30 o'clock arrived at Ligonier about noon. Dinner was served at the Brinker House, and this in itself was a big feature of the trip.

After dinner a majority of the men had a trap-shooting tournament on Rockwell Marlett's grounds. In this Robert Norris was high gun, with a score of two out of 25; and this notwithstanding that it was the first tournament in which he ever participated.

John Work and Dr. A. R. Kidd varied the monotony of the downward trip by going after a lone duck which they discovered at the reservoir. They succeeded in getting it, even if it did take an hour.

The cars of Dr. J. L. Cochran, C. J. Armstrong, Robert Norris, John Work, Dr. A. R. Kidd and V. J. Clark stopped off at Pleasant Unity on the way back, and had supper. A little while later a Stogstown was taken by the Storey, Edmunds and Mader cars.

ROOZE CONCEALED IN BREAD LOAF DOES NOT REACH MEN IN BASTILE.

Various methods are attempted to get liquor to prisoners confined in the lockup, but Policeman Stump believes he has discovered the most original plan yet.

A loaf of bread was brought to city hall for one of the prisoners. Stump started to deliver the goods when he became suspicious. The loaf seemed unusually heavy. Investigation disclosed a half-pint bottle of whiskey neatly concealed.

TINPLATE MEN PROTEST AGAINST STEEL TRUST SUIT

Stockholders and Employees Against Dissolving Steel Corporation; Burke Gets Petition.

A petition voluntarily signed by 360 stockholders and employees of the American Sheet & Tinplate Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, has been transmitted to Attorney General James C. McInerney. They protest against any dissolution of the corporation its sought in the pending federal suit.

The petition was presented to Congressman James P. Burke by a committee composed of these employees of the company: J. L. Neely, chairman; Albert E. Briscoe, Robert H. Dibble, L. P. Meyers and Roland J. Hudley. The petition declares that the signers have been employed by the American Sheet & Tinplate Company from 10 to 20 years and as such have received voluntary increases in salaries. They feel that their worth can be more accurately measured by the present corporation than would be possible by smaller units. They declare also that the dissolution would practically destroy the corporation's pension system, and further say:

"The prevention of accidents has been made a special study, as it never was before. The care of aged and incapacitated employees through pension and other means of things by which it seeks to make the lives of its employees easier, safer and brighter are so much better than anything we have known before that we view with alarm anything that threatens to destroy the organization. Many of us have spent our entire lives in the steel industry and can, therefore, compare conditions as they affect employees. We know that they are so much more humane under the United States Steel Corporation that we earnestly urge that you use all your powers to prevent its dissolution."

Similar petitions are being signed by practically every subsidiary of the Steel Corporation. The signers agree several thousand. They declare they have no desire to interfere with the legitimate enforcement of the anti-trust law, and believe that their knowledge of the conditions in the steel industry is such that they are justified in asking that at the proper time their views may be submitted to the Department of Justice with reference to the corporation's affairs generally.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

Contractor Paces Hopes to Keep Snyder Street Traffic Open.

Contractor Arthur G. Pace who is doing the paving on Snyder street, expects to finish one square this week, the bricks being on the ground and the concrete curb about completed. William H. Collins, 71 years old, a veteran of the Civil War, who died Saturday at his home in Wellsville, Kan., was born in Dunbar township in 1842 and spent his boyhood days there. He served in the 10th Iowa Cavalry, 1861-62, and was the last surviving captain of the regiment. He was promoted to sergeant, re-enlisted as a private in the 10th Iowa Cavalry, 1863-64, and was promoted to captain. He was mustered out with the company at Macon, Ga., August 23, 1865.

He participated in the battles of Stone River, Nashville, Frisco, Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain, Orchard Knob, Mission Ridge, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, Chickamauga, and led a charge at Nashville successfully.

BACKACHE VANISHES

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO.

Few Doses of Croxone Ease Stiff, Sore Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders.

If you suffer with backache—have pain in the neck or sides—soreness of muscles—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone promptly relieves these diseases because it really does reach the root cause. It works right into the walls and linings of the kidneys, cleans out the stopped-up inactive organs, neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood the waste and poisonous matter that lodges in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and gives the kidneys renewed strength so they can filter the blood and keep you well.

Croxone is different from all other remedies because it is so gentle that it is practically impossible to take it with out results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.—Adv.

TROLLEY CAR IS THE POOR MAN'S AUTOMOBILE

Help Keep It Clean, in Plea of One Company in Its Appeal to Patrons for Assistance.

Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Tucker, of the United States Bureau of Public Health, is to address the American Electric Railway Association at Atlantic City, October 13 to 17.

General Tucker's subject will be "Regulations on Sanitation as Relating to Public Carriers," and will be in line with the efforts of electric railway companies to secure clean cars for their patrons. Although the carrying of germs and clothing clothes has resulted in great improvement in the matter of car cleaning, the habits of the public are still the main factor.

It is interesting to note that many companies conduct a continuing campaign of education to secure the assistance of their patrons in keeping cars clean and the results are encouraging.

No sane man, it argues, would dole his motor car by expectorating in it, or by distributing peanut shells, paper and other refuse promiscuously around it. For the great majority of us the trolley takes the part of the "auto" and a regard for our own comfort requires a similar care.

MOTHER: IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED.

If Croup, Feverish, Constipated, Bilious, Stomach Sour, Give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today gives a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough inside cleansing of the bowels in that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit! The syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children and adults, and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!—Adv.

SICK, SOUL STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS.

Take "Pape's" Diapensin and in Five Minutes You'll Wonder What Became of Misery in Stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach— which portion of the food did the damage do in? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt, if you're gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps, head aches and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapensin. In five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapensin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapensin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach. It's no exaggeration. Adv.

CURED TERRIBLE HUMOR ON FACE

Could Not Go On Street Without Veil. Tells What Resinol Did For Her.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6, 1912.—"In December 1908, my face became sores. I tried everything that was recommended, and my face got worse instead of better. I spent over $100 and got no benefit. The face and nose were very red and the eruption had the appearance of small boils, which itched me terribly. I cannot tell you how terrible my face looked—all I can say is, it was dreadful, and I suffered beyond description. "I have not gone on the street any since 1908 without a veil, until now. Just four months ago a friend persuaded me to give Resinol a trial. I have used three cakes of Resinol Soap and less than a jar of Resinol Ointment, and my face is perfectly free from any eruption, and my skin is as clear and clean as any child's." (Signed) Mrs. M. J. Bateman, 4226 Viola St.

Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but if you have any skin trouble it will cost you nothing to try them. Send to Dept. H. M. Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each.

THE TARIFF HAMANS.

The Democratic Tariff bill is now a law and its effects will soon be apparent. The reductions in duties are more drastic in the metals schedule than in any other, and the American steel and iron trade will henceforth be compelled to stand on its own feet upon its own resources in competing with the foreign manufacturer at home as well as abroad.

American manufacturers approach the struggle with courage and determination. They are going to run their mills and furnaces and mines and coke ovens without disturbing factor conditions if possible to do so, and their superior natural resources and greater efficiency in operation are the hooks they hang this hope on.

Upon taking office, President Wilson made the absurd threat to hunt higher than any tariff. The businessmen who should undertake to start a panic by shutting up shop because of the Democratic Tariff revision. The threat was not altogether a flimsy one of speech. It was notice to the business interests that the power of the administration might raise an outcry that would injure the prospects of such a Democratic party.

There was no necessity for such a threat at the time it was made nor has there been since. The steel and iron business of the country is not in the hands of politicians, even though politicians may in times past have levied tribute upon it. The American steelmakers, furnacemen and coke operators are in business to stay. Contrary to the superstition in some Democratic circles, all such manufacturers are not millionaires, ready to retire and spend the remainder of their days in giving balls of money to public libraries and peace congresses.

Besides, there are the workmen to be considered. Strange as it may seem, most employers of labor have a human interest in their employees, just as the latter have a pride in their work, their establishment and the quality of its products.

The American manufacturer will never quit unless his industry is paralyzed by the impractical legislation of ignorant or vicious men posing as statesmen. This is one of the greatest dangers to modern manufacturing.

John E. H. Gary, the head of the United States Steel Corporation, and a wise head at that, expressed the situation accurately when he said:
"The gravest menace to this country is that the politicians who rule affairs today have so little at stake in the outcome of their acts. They are little affected if they turn prosperity into depression. Few of them have large bodies of employees dependent upon them for regular work at living wages. If they had, they would count the cost of action, and they would feel a heavier weight of responsibility.
After all, a nation is dependent upon its business activities and success.
Unless you can talk a man's stomach, it is useless to talk to him about nonmaterial things. You cannot build on an empty stomach. This applies to both nation and man."

The country is in too much under the influence of demagogic politicians, and it is just now suffering from the domination of a school of statesmen who are about to put into effect some radical notions concerning the Tariff and the Currency which are more expensive with nothing to recommend them. They are largely theoretical. Their practicable character is much in doubt. The wisdom of experience frowns upon them. But they have figured in politics as "ideas" and they will have to be tried out, even at the expense of big business and the bigger interest of the industrial army.

The politicians will never give up their hold on business through legislation of this character until the people elect enough business men to Congress to put laws placing the Tariff and Currency in the hands of expert commissioners, something which up to this time they have conspicuously failed to do though the wisdom of the proposition is so evident that it has long had popular approval.

The Policeman.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slawsh."

A policeman is a large, powerful man with tired feet, who spends his life hunting trouble. Policemen draw from $85 to $100 a month, but can ride free on the street cars. A good policeman cannot save much money, especially if the campaign expenses of the mayor are heavy. But a poor policeman who takes his conscience out in the back yard and kills it carefully with a club before going to work can often retire in a few years with several hundred thousand dollars.

Policemen were invented to guard society against itself. The policeman's duty is to suppress riots, disorders, crime and joy riding. He is also supposed to give chase to the fleeing hold-up man and run him down to earth. In order to fit him for this pursuit the all-wise government of our cities have dressed him in a nineteen pound coat with four acres of tail to it, and large, thick brogans. To watch a policeman chasing a slim young pickpocket is like watching an automobile truck trying to run down an aeroplane and corner it in an alley.

Policemen are admitted free to the theaters and ball games, and always get a front seat at all prominent catastrophes. In return for this, however, they have to mix with society composed almost entirely of unde-scribables. Many a young man, who has watched a policeman lounging grandly past a hundred fruit stands has envied him in his carefree existence. But that very night the Mc-Guffin street gang may lay for this same policeman and by the time he has called the police to such a calamity like the wreck of the Heperus, he looks like the wreck of the Heperus.

Policemen lead uncertain lives, and are not a good insurance risk. Because of this the same all-wise governments have equipped them with large clubs and magazine revolvers.

It is much easier to club a man first and argue with him later, and so the police have become one of our great city institutions. They do things better over in England. There the policeman goes about armed only with a soft answer and a note book.

"Invented to guard society against itself."

One can kick a London policeman in the shins without having his head beaten off down to his ears. But the next day he will go to the works for a month for resisting an officer.
If American cities took more pains to preserve the sanctity of the policeman's person they would not have to make his duty so calamitous to the widow and orphans of the casual wrong doer.

Why Not Wear Advertised Shoes?

TAKE, FOR EXAMPLE—

A man prepares for dinner—he shaves himself with an advertised safety razor, using an advertised soap, and finishes with an advertised face powder. Then he puts on advertised underwear, advertised linen, evening dress made by an advertised tailor. Then after his dinner he is driven in his advertised automobile to an advertised show.

WHY NOT WEAR ADVERTISED SHOES.

Show us an up-to-date merchant in Connellsville and you will find he advertises. Take your newspaper and look through it, and note whether the progressive merchant doesn't advertise. Every day the advertised line is pressing the unadvertised line a little nearer to the wall. The non-advertiser used to fight to get business—today he must fight to hold it.

Why not wear Walk-Overs, Men? or Queen Quality, Women?—They are always good.

HAIR CAME OUT
IN HANDFULS
Eczema on Face, Back of Ears and Scalp. Also on Hands, Arms and Limbs. Itching and Burning. Cuticure Soap and Ointment Cured.

"Nine years ago I had a breaking out on my skin, some on my face, back of my ears and on my scalp which was the worst place, and it caused my hair to come out. It was also on my hands, arms and limbs. They said it was a form of eczema. I had that awful burning and itching and especially on my scalp. The eruption was like a rash and would not dry and scale off. It itched and burned so badly that I could not keep from scratching it. Everything that I touched it irritated it. I could not rest at night and would scratch in my sleep. My hair came out in handfuls. I could not half come out in water often, for that only made the trouble worse and made the knuckles crack open and bleed.

I used a medicine for almost a year without effect. One day I thought I would try the Cuticure Soap and Ointment, as I had seen by the papers of cures by them.
I washed the affected parts with the Cuticure Soap and then applied the Cuticure Ointment. They relieved the burning and itching almost to nothing. I used it every day the ointment to keep it from coming in and one month. I was cured and have never had a return of the trouble since and it is more than three years since that time."

GINK AND DINK—Petey Will Stand for No Stylish Nonsense.

DEVELOPMENT OF ROAD SYSTEM.

"The people are the State." What ever affects one is the concern of all. In that larger equation that considers the general welfare. The prosperity of any special class adds to the general prosperity. An advantage extended to any line of industry is an advantage, not only to the community where that industry is located, but to that assemblage of communities which constitute a commonwealth.

To repopulate the seven thousand abandoned farms in Pennsylvania will add to the material interests, not only of the counties and townships in which these farms are located, but of the State as a whole. The return or replacement of the 100,000 people to the 22 counties whose population shrunk by that number between 1890 and 1900, and of the 32,000 people to 19 counties the population of which decreased to that extent between 1900 and 1910, will not only mean a larger local production and consequent increased local business activity, but will also be indicated in the greater figures of the general welfare of the State.

Properly cultivated, and with proper facilities for marketing, there is no more productive state in the Union than Pennsylvania. With its large cities, its mines, and its extensive industrial and manufacturing interests the demand for food products from the farms is insistent and constantly growing. All that is needed to bring the producer and consumer together to the great profit of both, is a ready means for the transportation of the products. That means can only be provided by improved highways over which it will not cost so large a percentage of the value of the produce as is now the case to transport it from the place of its growth to the place of consumption.

The area of farming land in Pennsylvania which can profitably be devoted to market gardening may be trebled or quadrupled when the roads are improved with a hard surface and with easy grades; and market gardening is away and by far the most profitable use to which farm land can be put; and land that is available for such use is invariably saleable at a much higher price than that which, by reason of the inaccessibility of markets, must be devoted to other purposes.

A close study of conditions in Pennsylvania, and of results achieved in other states indicates that the increase in value of property caused by the improvement of a road will amount to twenty-five dollars an acre for a distance of a half mile each side of the road so improved. There are ten thousand miles in the State road system, and by the time that is completed there will be ten thousand miles of State Aid county roads also built, making a total, not counting state aid township roads, of twenty thousand miles of well graded, drained, hard surfaced roads.

A strip of land half a mile wide along each side of these roads would make a total of twelve million, eight hundred thousand acres, and the increase in selling value, at $25 per acre, will amount to the enormous sum of three hundred and twenty millions of dollars. And the land will sell for worth the increase, by reason of the greater opportunities for profitable production and cheaper marketing. Lands further from the main highways will also greatly increase in value, according to the distance and the improvement of the township roads.

The scenery in the mountains and hilly regions of Pennsylvania is unsurpassed. Wherever it has been advertised or exploited, as has been done by some railway companies, it has attracted attention throughout the civilized world, wherever railway advertisements reach, and that is nearly everywhere. But for every single scene that has ever been photographed and exploited there are thousands equally fine which have never seen the lens of a camera, and are unknown to fame. There are trout streams, and waterfalls, and forests, and rocky ledges, and canyons, and all the other wild and picturesque elements which are so refreshing to tired dwellers of cities, who seek solace in summer in sylvan shades.

Increasingly, year by year, the people of the cities can afford to do so get out for a season into the hills and mountains of recreation and rest. They buy land, in large or small tracts, as their means and inclinations suggest; they build summer homes; some large and pretentious; some quiet and modest; some bungalows, and some of the shack or log cabin order. And some carry tents, and make camps in which to recuperate for the arduous duties they must soon resume. Other thousands go where they can find summer hotels, and boarding houses which are within their means.

There can be no finer locations for such summer homes and summer resorts than in the mountains of Pennsylvania, where the elevation is such that the nights are always cool, where the water is always sparkling and pure, where the air is fresh and invigorating. And all that is needed to bring the people to these mountains is a system of improved roads over which they can travel in comfort, and enterprising real estate men, and hotel men and others experienced in catering to this special class will do the rest, and make local markets for farm products in the deepest recesses of the hills and mountains.

Millions of dollars of Pennsylvania money is spent every summer by those who from this state to the mountains of New England or to the Adirondacks, or Catskills, or elsewhere. Those states have built roads looking particularly to the comfort and convenience and encouragement of this class of people, and have profited greatly thereby.

With improved roads reaching into and through these sections of Pennsylvania, no State Road system does reach, only waiting improvement, not only will thousands of Pennsylvanians take advantage of the opportunities presented, but other thousands, from other large cities in surrounding states, will also be attracted and the people and state will profit enormously.

These and many other phases of development are open to the people of the State of Pennsylvania by the building of good roads throughout the state. And the people will vote for or against the measure which will accomplish these results at the November election.

NO TIME TO KNOCK.

This is not the time for the friends or enemies of any administration to attempt to "get even" for any real or fancied grievance by standing in the path of progress. Under different administrations the work of road building must go on, as provided by law. There will be other administrations, and if one does not suit the people it can be changed two years afterward. But the work of building the roads should not be interrupted. Every interest in the State, agricultural, commercial, social, educational, demands that highway construction continue until the State and State Aid road systems are finished.

Unless the amendment to the constitution authorizing the bond issue be carried at the coming election road construction in the State will progress very slowly. Work on the State Road System had to stop on August 1 of this year because of the inadequacy of the appropriations. To relieve this situation, and make such conditions impossible in the future, all parties and interests should work together for the amendment.

Only by carrying the bond proposition at the coming election can the work of completing the State and State Aid road systems go forward. And the building of these roads means much to every resident of the State. It means for the farmer an improved road from his farm, or near it, to his county seat or other market point; it means additional facilities for village and city merchants in the distribution of goods; it means for every class increased advantages, increased prosperity and comfort.

Carrying the constitutional amendment does not create a debt. It only gives the right to create one to get funds to build roads with. If the Legislature of 1915 and subsequent legislatures think best to do so, through our system of electing a new legislature every two years the people have continued control of the debt proposition.

First Picture of the First Boat to Pass Through the Gatun Lock, Panama Canal.

FIRST BOAT TO GO THROUGH PANAMA CANAL LOCK.

This is the first picture of the first boat to pass through a lock in the Panama canal. For that reason it ranks next in importance to the picture to be taken when the first ship goes from ocean to ocean through the canal. The tug entered the lock from the Atlantic entrance of the canal and was gradually lifted through the series of chambers up to Gatun lake, a rise of about 35 feet. The tops of the locks are seen covered with officials, tourists and workmen, who cheered as the tug went through the various chambers. The tug went through Gatun lock to Gatun lake in two hours, miter gates and culvert valves working smoothly. The passage of ships when the lock is in full working order will require one hour and thirty minutes. The tug's journey was watched by Colonel George W. Goethals, chairman of the Panama Canal Commission.

A TRIBE OF TRAMPS.

East African Outcasts That Won't Work and Will Steal.

While on a hunting expedition to British East Africa in quest of pictures of wild horses Paul J. Palmer discovered that even among savages there is a tribe which closely resembles our own "knights of the road." They are the Wandorobos. They are found along the Gussu Nyiro and Gussu Nyiro rivers and are regarded as outcasts by the other native tribes.

The Wandorobos most closely resemble his American brother, the tramp. In that he refuses to work. He is a hunter and is exceedingly expert with the poisoned arrow, which he uses exclusively. A large club he carries is used to ward off and to secure wild beasts that may come too near.

Although the Wandorobos have settlements in some places, he wanders far from home and usually makes his bed in the top of a tree to be safe from wild animals. He is a notorious thief, and whenever he approaches an encampment the askari, or policeman, who is the only native permitted by the government to wear arms, watches the Wandorobos very carefully, for there is nothing too hot or too heavy for him to try to make off with—Chicago Inter Ocean.

CUTTING THE BASES.

Mike Kelly Once Scored From Second Through the Pitcher's Box.

Writing on "Take a Chance Versus Play It Safe" in baseball in the American Magazine, Hugh S. Fullerton told the following story about Mike Kelly, the great Chicago ball player of a generation ago:

"The chances Kelly took were the marvels of his era. I have seen him again and again cut straight across the diamond from first to third base or from second to the home plate and land in safety because the umpire failed to see his reckless move.

"One day Kelly cut from first to third on a slow infield bouncer. He ran past the umpire, who was racing toward first, screaming at him to watch the play, and swinging straight across, he tore for third. Gaffney called the runner out at first and whistled just in time to catch 'Kel' going into third, then called him out. Kelly walked to the umpire, protested an instant; then, knowing Gaffney had caught him in the act, he remarked, 'All right, Mr. Umpire; I've never been on these grounds before and didn't know which was second base.'

"Two innings later he scored from second base through the pitcher's box and was not seen."

A face that cannot smile is never good.—Martial.

Milady's Mirror

Beauty and Borex.

To remove the shiny look common to some complexions add a pinch of borex to the water in which the face is bathed. A weak solution of borex is highly recommended as a wash for sore eyes, redness of the edges of the lids and for tired and smarting eyes. The same solution is also an excellent mouth wash. It is a healing lotion for slight cuts and scratches.

To soften and whiten the hands bathe them in moderately warm water to which a good sized pinch of borex has been added.

To remove the odor of perspiration use borex with a powder puff under the arms after bathing. A solution of borex and bicarbonate of soda, used as a wash for face, neck, arms and hands when going out and returning to the house and especially when visiting the sick, is considered very efficacious in warding off contagious diseases.

If the water for bathing is hard the addition of a little borex will soften it, and a pinch of borex added to the water in which infants are bathed tends to strengthen the skin and prevent chafing. The strength of the solution may vary somewhat according to the purpose for which it is to be used. A teaspoonful to a pint of water is not too strong for the most uses, but for infants and very young children it may be made weaker.

Health and Beauty.

It will be absolutely necessary for you to get a good rear view of your face as well as a front view. Don't count any minute wasted that is spent at the mirror when purchasing a hat. Look at it from every angle. You will gain much pleasure in wearing a hat that you know is just right and remember its good qualities long after you have forgotten the bill.

Cool baths suit some temperaments and hot baths bring the best results in others. Morning baths act as a tonic for some, and the evening tub is the most appropriate for others. The best thing to do is for each individual to experiment until she has found which seems to have the best effect in her own case and then abide by the rule. Don't make the rule an unbreakable one, however, or you will be laying up trouble for yourself.

If you once get the shower bath habit you will never give it up, so begin tomorrow morning. When using the regular shower be sure to protect the hair with a rubber cap, use pure soap and warm water first; then, when all the soap is rinsed off, rub the body with a handful of sea salt. Shower again with water cool enough to give a pleasurable shock, rub briskly with a coarse towel and a moderately stiff flesh brush and then spray the body with a lotion.

Fine Skin Tonic.

Exercise is a splendid skin tonic. A brisk walk, no matter if in the rain, will freshen the complexion, even as it freshens the flowers, and a simple aperient will do wonders for a muddy skin. It remains for all women to preserve such beauty as they have and to cure the defects which are peculiar to them or that time has wrought. Every skin is different and must be treated accordingly, and it takes a reasoning woman to experiment carefully and find out the proper method of treatment for her skin.

Look of sleep ages a woman possibly more than anything else. Most women who are inclined to be nervous require from eight to nine hours. Six or seven hours of rest suffice for others. The hours before midnight contain the magic wherein beauty is dispensed freely. One hour before 12 will do more good than two afterward.

Sleep without a pillow, if possible, or a very small one of couch size. The feet should be higher than the head. This makes the flow of blood over the heart even. Sleep on your right side, with the limbs outstretched and the arms down at the side rather than over the head, which, it is said, encourages bad dreams.

Starching Humans.

From London comes the news that starch will have the same effect in human laundry as it has upon the family wash. Taken in the bath, it will stiffen the muscles and smooth out the wrinkles of care. Here is the formula for its application:

All you have to do is to buy a pound of ordinary pure starch from your grocer. Then dissolve the starch in a nappanful of hot water and pour the solution into a well filled bath of water at a temperature of 95 to 98 degrees, but not exceeding blood heat. Then to take the cure lie down flat in the bath—with all but the face and hair immersed—and remain there for at least twenty minutes. No more hot water must be added or the beneficial effect will be considerably marred. Paris is raving over the stimulating effects of such baths, which impart to the flesh a feeling as though one had bathed in rich cream. A starch

NAMED BY MISTAKE.

That is What Happened to Three of Vermont's Towns.

It is not often that a town is named by mistake, but about 150 years ago this thing happened—not to one town, but to three towns in Vermont. At that time a grant of land was made by New Hampshire to some Connecticut settlers. This tract then, as now, was divided into three townships—Burlington, on the hillside of Lake Champlain; Colchester, just north, and Williston, east. The three towns were chartered on the same day, and it was at this time that the names were named.

The Burling family took up their land in the north section (Colchester), and it seems to be true that their name was to have been given the town so that it should have been called Burlington. Other settlers took up the eastern portion (Williston), and the rest remained in the part by the lake (Burlington). Among these last was the Willis family, and there is evidence that they expected to call the city Williston. However, there was so much confusion in the entering of the records that the town where the Burlings settled was called Colchester, the town of the Willis family was named Burlington, while the town to the east was called Williston. And so they have remained to this day.—Ladies' Home Journal.

"I expected to see Miss Summers in a place with rage, but she stared at Mrs. Sam's back, and after a minute she laughed.

"See!" she remarked slowly. "You're the sister, aren't you?"

"Mr. Sam had given up trying to hide the bottle and now he sat on the floor with a lamp and came over to the fire.

"It's you, the situation is embarrassing," he began. "Under the circumstances, don't you think it would be better for you to go—under the circumstances?"

"I am not going to leave, if that is what you are about to suggest," she said. "I've been trying to see Dicky Carter the last two days, and I'll stay here until I see him. I'll stay right here, and I'll have what's coming to me or I'll have the reason why. Don't forget for a minute that I know why Mr. Pierce is here, and that I can spoil the little game by calling the extra act. If I want to."

When she was safely gone I brought Mr. Dick out to the fire. His sister would not speak to him.

Mike went to Mr. Pierce that day and asked for a raise of salary. He did not get it. Perhaps as things have turned out, it was for the best, but it is strange to think how different things would have been if he'd been given it. He was sent up later, of course, for six months for malicious mischief, but by that time the damage was done.

CHAPTER X.

That was on a Saturday morning. It had stopped snowing and the sun was shining, although it was so cold that the snow blew like powder. By eleven o'clock every one who could walk had come to the springhouse. About twelve o'clock Mr. Thoburn came in, and as he opened the door, he leaped Arabella. The women made a fuss over the creature and cuddled her, and when I tried to put her out everybody objected. So she stayed, and Miss Summers put her through a lot of tricks, while the men crowded around.

Mr. von Inwald and Miss Patty came in just then and stood watching.

"And now," said Mr. von Inwald, "propose, as a reward to Miss Arabella, a glass of this wonderful water. Minnie, a glass of water for Arabella!"

"She doesn't drink out of one of my glasses," I declared angrily. "It's one of my rules that does—"

"Full!" said Mr. Thoburn. "What a good for man is good for beast. Besides, the little beggar's thirsty."

Well they made a great fuss about the creature's being thirsty, and so finally I got a pail of spring water and I drank until I thought it would burst. I'm not vicious, as I say, but I wish it had.

Well the dog finished and lay down by the fire and everything seemed to go on as before.

"Just what is the record here?" the bishop asked. "I've ordered eight glasses, but I find it more than a sufficient."

"We had one man here once who could drink 26 at a time," I said, "but he was a German."

"He was a tank," Mr. Sam corrected grumpily. "He was watching something on the floor—I couldn't see what."

"Consider," said Thoburn, standing and holding his glass to the light, "how we are at the mercy of this little spirit. A convulsion in the bowels of the earth, and its health giving properties may be changed to the direct poison. How do we know, you and I, some such change has not occurred overnight? Unlikely as it is, it is a possibility that, sitting here calmly, we may be sipping our death potion."

Some of the people actually put down their glasses and everybody began to look uneasy except Mr. Sam, who was still watching something. I could not see. He suddenly straightened up and glanced at Miss Summers. "Perhaps I'm mistaken," he said, "but I think there is something the matter with Arabella."

Everybody looked Arabella was lying on her back, jerking and twitching and foaming at the mouth.

"She's been poisoned!" Miss Summers screamed and fell on her knees beside her. "It's that wretched water!"

There was pretty nearly a riot in a minute. Everybody jumped up and stared at the dog, and everybody remembered the water he or she had just had, and coming on top of Mr. Thoburn's speech, it made them babbling lunatics.

Well, I did what I could. The worst of it was, I wasn't sure it wasn't the water. I thought possibly Mr. Pierce had made a mistake in what he had bought at the drug store, and although I don't as a rule drink it myself, I began to feel queer in the pit of my stomach.

Mr. Thoburn came over to the spring, and filling a glass, took it to the light, with every one watching anxiously. When he brought it back he stooped over the railing and whispered to me.

"When did you fix it?" he asked sternly.

"Last night," I answered. "It was no time to beat about the bush."

"It's a yellowish then usual," he said. "I'm inclined to think something has coming forward. "I've had eleven I tell you, I've been feeling queer for 24 hours! I'm poisoned! That's what I am."

He staggered out, with Mr. Biggs just behind him, and from that moment they were all demoralized. One by one they left to look for Doctor Barnes, or to get the white of egg, which somebody had suggested as an antidote.

I was alone, looking down at Arabella. Or rather, I thought I was alone, for there was a movement by one of the windows and Miss Patty came forward and knelt by the dog.

"Poor little thing! Minnie, I believe she put the dog's head in her lap, and the little beast opened its eyes and tried to wag its blue tail."

"Oh, Miss Patty, Miss Patty!" I exclaimed, and I got down beside her and cried on her shoulder, with her stroking my hand and calling me dear-est! Me!

I was wiping my eyes when the door was thrown open and Mr. Pierce ran in. He had no hat on and his hair was powdered with snow. He stopped just inside the door and looked at Miss Patty.

"My God!" he exclaimed, "I thought you were poisoned!"

"I am all right," she assured him, and little Arabella will be all right, too. She's had a convulsion, that's all—probably from overeating. As for the others—"

"Where is the—where is von Inwald?"

"He has gone to take the white of an egg," she replied rather haughtily. He walked to the window and I saw him looking hard at something outside in the snow. When he walked back to the fire he was smiling, and he stooped over and poked Arabella with his finger.

"See that was it?" he said. "Full to the scupper, poor little wretch! Minnie, I am hoist with my own petard, which in this case was a boomerang."

"Which is in English?" I asked.

"With the instinct of her sex, Arabella has unearthed what was meant to be buried forever. She had gorged herself into a convulsion on that rabbit I shot last night!"

They went to the house together, he carrying Arabella like a sick baby and Miss Patty beside him. I went over and looked down into the spring, and it seemed to me it was darker than usual. It may have smelled stronger, but the edge had been taken off my nose, so to speak, by being there so long.

The only thing I could think of was to empty the spring and let the water come in plain. I could put a little sulphur in to give it color and flavor, and if it turned out that Mr. Pierce was right and that Arabella was only a glutton, I could put in the other things later.

I was carrying out my first pailful when Doctor Barnes came down the path and took the pail out of my hand. "What are you doing?" he asked. "Making a slide?"

"No," I said bitterly, "I am watering the flowers."

"Good!" He was not a bit put out. "Let me help you." Inside, he put down the pail, and pulling me in, closed the door.

"Now forget it!" he commanded. "Just because a lot of damn fools see a dog in a fit and have one, too, is that any reason for your being scared, wretched and knock-kneed? Lord, I wish you could have seen them staggering into my office!"

"I saw enough," I said with a shiver. "That German, von Inwald," he went on, "he's the limit. He accused us of poisoning him for reasons of state!"

"Where are they now?"

"My dear girl," he answered, putting down his glass, "what has been pounded into me ever since I struck the place? The baths! I prescribe 'em all day and dream 'em all night. Where are the poisoners now? They are screaming, screaming, screaming in the hot rooms of the bath department—all of them, every one of them! In the hold and the hatchways down!"

Just then somebody fell against the door and stumbled into the room. It was Minnie, as white as milk, and breathing in gasps.

"Quick!" she screamed, "Minnie, quick!"

"What is it?" I asked, jumping up. She'd fallen back against the door frame and stood with her hand clutching her heart.

"That devil—Mike!" she panted. "He has turned on the steam in the men's bath and gone—gone away!"

"With people in the bath?" Doctor Barnes asked, slamming down the pail. Minnie nodded.

"Then why in creation don't they get out of the bath until we can shut off the steam?" I demanded, grabbing up my shawl. But Minnie shook her head in despair.

"They can't," she answered, "he's hid their clothes!"

The next thing I recall is running like mad up the stairs with Doctor Barnes beside me, stepping on by the arm. I only spoke once that I remember and that was just as we got to the house.

"That settles it!" I panted, desperately. "It's all over."

"Not a bit of it!" he said, shoving me up the steps and into the hall. "The old teakettle is just getting 'hot' up a bit. By the gods and little fishes, just listen to it singing down there!"

The help was gathered in a crowd at the head of the bathroom staircase, where a cloud of steam was coming up, and down below we could hear furious talking, and somebody shouting, "Mike! Mike!" in a voice that was choked with rage and steam.

"Clothes! Send us some clothes!" It was Mr. Sam calling. The rest was swallowed up in a fresh roaring as if a steam pipe had given away. That settled the people below. With a burst of fury they swarmed up the stairs in their bath sheets, the bishop leading, and just behind him, talking as no gentleman should talk under any circumstances, Senator Biggs. The rest followed, their red faces shining through the steam—all of them murderous, holding their sheets around them with one hand, and waving the other in frenzy. It was awful.

The help scattered and ran, but I stood my ground. The sight of a man in a sheet didn't scare me and it was not time for weakness. A moment later the engineer came up and after him Mr. Pierce, with a towel over his mouth and a screw driver in his hand. He was white with rage.

"Who saw Mike last?" he shouted.

"Here Mr. Moody, who's small at any time, and who was standing in a sheet with a red face above, looked like a lighted cigarette, darted out of the crowd and caught him by the sleeve."

"Here!" he cried, "we've got a few things to say to you, you young—"

"Take your hand off my arm!" thundered Mr. Pierce.

The storm broke with that. They crowded around Mr. Pierce, yelling like maniacs, and he stood there, white-faced, and let them wear themselves out. The courage of a man in a sea of lions was nothing to it. Doctor Barnes forced his way through the crowd and stood there beside him.

And I stood there and watched, my mind a whirl, expecting every minute to hear that they were all leaving, or to have some one forget and shake both fists at once.

And that's how it ended finally—I mean of course, that they said they would all leave immediately, and that he ought to be glad to have them go quietly, and not have him jailed for malicious mischief or compounding a felony. The whole thing was an outrage, and the three train would leave the house as empty as a squeezed lemon.

"We've Got a Few Things to Say to You."

"At three o'clock, then," said Mr. Pierce. "Very well."

"Don't be a fool!" I heard Mr. Sam from the crowd.

"Is that all you have to say?" roared Mr. von Inwald. "Haven't you any apology to make, sir?"

"Neither apology nor explanation to you," Mr. Pierce retorted. And to the other "It is an unfortunate accident—incident, if you prefer." He looked at Thoburn, who was the only one in a bathrobe, and who was the only cheerful one in the lot. "I had refused a request of the bath man's and he has taken this form of revenge. It gives me the responsibility I am willing to take. If you expect me to ask you to stay I'll not do it. I don't mind saying that I am as tired of all this as you are. In fact, I'd about decided on a new order of things for this place anyhow. It's going to be a real health resort, run for people who want to get well or keep well. People who wish to be cheerful, overworked and coddled need not come—or stay."

The bishop spoke over the heads of the others, who looked dazed.

"Does that mean," he inquired mildly, "that—guests must either obey this order of things or go away?"

Mr. Pierce looked at the bishop and smiled.

"I'm sorry, sir," he said, "but as every one is leaving, anyhow—"

They fairly jumped at him then. They surrounded him in a howling mob and demanded how he dared to turn them out, and what did he mean by saying they were overworked, and they would leave when they were good and ready and not before, and he could go to blazes. It was the most scandalous thing I've ever known of. At Hope Springs, and in the midst of it, Mr. Pierce stood cool and quiet, waiting for a chance to speak. And when the time came he jumped in and told them the truth about themselves, and most of it hurt. He was good and mad, and he stood there and picked out the flabby ones and the fat ones, the whisky livers and the tobacco hearts and the banquet stomachs, and called them out by name. He got through and stood looking at them in their sheets, and then he said coolly:

"The bus will be ready at two-thirty, gentlemen, and turning on his heels went into the office and closed the door."

They scattered to their rooms in every stage of rage and excitement, and at last only Mr. Sam and I were left staring at each other. "Damned young idiot!" he said. "I wish to heaven you'd never suggested bringing him here, Minnie!"

And leaving me speechless with indignation, he trailed himself and his sheet up the stairs.

CHAPTER XI.

I couldn't stand any more. It was all over. I rushed to my room and threw myself on the bed. At two-thirty I heard the bus come to the porch creakers under my window and then drive away; that was the last straw. I put a pillow over my head so nobody could hear me, and then there I had hysterics.

And then somebody jerked the pillow away and I looked up, with my eyes swollen almost shut, and it was Doctor Barnes. He has a glass of water in his hand and he held it right above me.

"One more yell," he said, "and it goes over your head!"

I sat up and stared at him. I could hardly see out of my eyes. He had his back to the light but I could tell that he had a cross of adhesive plaster on his cheek and that one eye was almost shut. He smiled when he saw my expression.

"It's the temperament," he said. "It goes with the hair. I've got it too, only I'm apt to go out and pick a fight at such times, and a woman hasn't got that outlet. As you see, I found Mike, and my disfigurement is to Mike's as startling to the wonderer's glare. Come and take a walk."

I didn't want to go, but anything was better than sitting in the room mooping. I put on my jacket and Miss Patty's chinchillas, which cheered me a little but as we went downstairs the quiet of the place sat on my chest like a weight.

"The Jenningses are still here," said the doctor. "The old man is madder than any hornet ever dared be, and they go in the morning. But the situation is too much for our German friend. He left with the others."

Well, we went out and I took the path I knew best, which was out toward the springhouse. At the little bridge over the creek Doctor Barnes stopped, and leaning over the rail, took a good look at me.

"When you self contained women go to pieces," he said, "you pretty near smash, don't you? You look as if you'd had a death in your family."

"This was my family," I half sniveled.

But, he said, "you'll be getting married and having a home of your own and forgetting all about this."

He looked at me with his sharp eyes. There's probably some nice chap in the village, eh?

Look here, I turned on him, "if you're talking all this nonsense to keep my mind off things, you needn't."

"I'm not," he said. "I'm asking for the sake of my own mind, but well not bother about that now. We'd better start back."

We went back to the house and I straightened the news stand Amanda King having taken a violent toothache as a result of the excitement. The Jenningses were packing to go, and Miss Summers had got a bottle of perfume and about forty other things. At six o'clock Thoburn beckoned to me from the door of the officers' dining room and said she'd put the basket in the snow by the grape arbor. I got ready, with a heavy heart, to take it out. I had forgotten all about my dinner, for one thing and I had to carry bad news.

But Mr. Pierce had been there before me. I saw tracks in the fresh snow, for, praise heaven! it had snowed all that week and our prints were filled up almost as fast as we made them. When I got to the shelter-house it was in a wild state of excitement. Mrs. Dick, with her cheeks flushed had gorged all her things on the cot and was rolling them up in sheets and newspapers. But Mr. Dick was sitting on the box in front of the fire with his curly hair standing every way. He had been roasting potatoes and as I opened the door, he picked one up and poked at it to see if it was done.

"Damn!" he said, and dropped it.

Mr. Dick sat on the cot rolling up a pink ribbon and looked at him.

"If you want to know exactly my reason for insisting on moving tonight, I'll tell you," she said, paying no attention to me. "It is my disposition."

He didn't say anything, but he put his foot on the potato and smashed it.

"If I had to be shut in here with you one more day," she went on, "I'd hate you."

The Stage and The Players.

A SCENE FROM "BILLY, THE KID"

THE SOISSON.

"BILLY, THE KID" TONIGHT

One of the most striking successes in the melodramatic field is the well known play of western life, "Billy, the Kid," which Vanvor Lohm has been looking for two performances at the Soisson Theatre, madame and night, Wednesday, October 8.

The play while melodramatic is consistent and tells a story that is full of interest having for its climactic situations which are exceptionally dramatic. The comediment is furnished by a good natured fishman a fine type of the old southern colonel and his colored orderly. The story of the play opens on the home divide of a St. New Mexico ranch. Here are living the hero his mother, who thinks that her first husband is dead has married a second time, and his step-father. The hero is a bad full of life, who is at the age when the sensation of a life and he has decided that he is to become a bandit. The home life is led until one day the shadow creeps across the threshold in the coming of Mrs. Wright's first husband who driven from the last by his misdeeds, by accident finds the wife he deserted and who believes him dead. He tried to persuade his wife to assist him in a new crime, the abduction of certain deeds belonging to his second husband and finding that she would rather tell that has band the entire truth plans the disabused plan of making Billy his own son, a thief and in outlaw. By the aid of liquor he succeeds in this but even then does not get possession of the coveted papers even though he murders both Wright and his wife being found almost red-handed by Billy who then and there takes an oath to avenge their deaths. Billy becomes an outlaw and there is a reward put on his head for the second act finds him at the head of a band the most ferocious man in the territory. Many are the traps I set for him but he escapes them all and in the end returns to the East to lead in honest and God-fearing life accomplished by the girl whom he has loved since childhood.

"Why the one more day?" he asked without looking up.

But she didn't answer him. She was in the worst kind of a temper; she threw the ribbon down, and coming over, lifted the lid of my basket and looked in.

"Hum again!" she exclaimed ungratefully. "Thanks so much for remembering us, Minnie. I dare say our dinner today slipped your mind!"

"I wonder if it strikes you Minnie?" Mr. Dick said nothing to me for the first time, "that if you and Sam hadn't been so confounded meddling, that fellow Pierce would be washing bugles in the village livery stable where he belongs, and I'd be in one piece of property that's as good as gone this minute."

I was in a bad humor, anyhow, and I'd had enough. I stood just inside the door and I told them I'd done the best I could, not for them, but because I'd promised the old doctor, and if I'd made mistakes I'd answer for them to him. If I ever met him in the next world. And in the meantime I washed my hands of the whole thing, and they might make out as best they could. I was going.

Mrs. Dick heard me through. Then she came over and put her hand on mine where it lay on the table.

"You're perfectly right," she said. "I know how you have tried, and that the fault is all that wretched Pierce's. You mustn't mind Mr. Carter, Minnie. He's been in that sort of humor all day."

He looked at her with the most miserable face I ever saw, but he didn't say anything. She sighed, the little wretch.

I plodded back with my empty basket. I had only one clear thought—that I wouldn't have any more tramp across the golf links in the snow. I wanted to get back to my room and go to bed and forget.

But as I came near the house I saw Mr. Pierce come out on the front piazza and switch on the lights. He stood there looking out into the snow, and the next minute I saw why. Coming up the hill and across the lawn was a shadowy line of people, black against the white. I thought for a minute that my brain had gone wrong, then the first figure came into the light, and it was the bishop. He stood at the front of the steps and looked up at Mr. Pierce.

"I dare say," he said, trying to look easy, "that this is sooner than you expected us!"

Mr. Pierce looked down at the crowd. Then he smiled a growing smile that ended in a grin.

On the contrary," he said, "I've been expecting you for an hour or more."

Human Targets and Cannons for Giants In Baseball Battle With Athletics

These are the latest group pictures of the catchers and pitchers of the New York Giants, taken at the first of the world's series. The pitching staff of McGraw's team is regarded as the best in the National League, and it was upon these men, particularly Matty, Marquard, Tarsan and Damaree, that the "Little Napoleon" placed his confidence of winning the series against the heavy sluggers of the Athletics. McGraw's backstops are seasoned men, particularly Chief Meyers, who was picked to lead off behind the bat.

Athletics Make Their Bingles Count and Post Fielding Checks the New York Batter; Final Score Is 8-1 but Giants Say They Will Win Out.

Mr. Baker hit his customary homer in the first game of the world's series at New York yesterday. With Mr. Baker of Trappe, Md., wielding the stick to such advantage, the outcome of the contest is a foregone conclusion. The Athletics won, 8-1. They also chased Eddie Marquard and the Giants' Dugger and McCormick were there in the pinch.

Connellsville fans heard the game, play by play, when Sam Flinnigan scattered his silver tones over half a block on Main street. Flinnigan acted as megaphone man for the Smith House's famed wire service. It was the best world's series service the town has ever had since The Courier covered the Pittsburgh-Detroit clash. The Smith House management, having a leased wire right into the hotel, will continue to play the game in full each day of the series. Yesterday's box score:

TONNAGE SHRINKS

Unfilled Orders Expected to Show Big Decrease for September.

Production at the United States Steel Corporation's mills in September was probably between 100,000 and 1,000,000 tons and new business is understood to have averaged about two-thirds of the output, so that the unfilled tonnage report for the month will probably show a decrease of not less than 300,000 tons compared with a decrease of 175,000 for August.

This present rate of production about 11,000,000 tons annually compares with the high rate of about 14,000,000 tons a year, reached in the late spring of this year.

What effect the new tariff will have upon orders and prices it will be able to gauge better after the lower schedule has been in operation for the few months. There is every probability, however, that buyers of steel will put off purchasing until some definite indication of the attitude of foreign makers as to prices can be obtained.

If the rail orders expected to be placed in October materialize, this will give the steel companies, and the steel corporation in particular, a considerable tonnage in this one line and even if orders in other lines show no improvement over last month the total of all business received should be sufficient to about balance production.

NATURE'S WARNING.

Connellsville People Must Recognize and Heed It.

Kidney ills come mysteriously, but nature usually warns you. Notice the kidney secretions. See if the color is unnatural. If there is swelling and tenderness, passages frequent, scanty, painful, its time to fear serious kidney trouble.

It's time to use Don's Kidney Pills. I once have done great work in this locality.

Mrs. L. A. Johnson, 52 E. Craig St., Uniontown, Pa., says: "I suffered intensely from backache and pains through my kidneys. Headaches and dizzy spells annoyed me, and my kidneys were sluggish. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I often noticed sediment in them. Don's Kidney Pills helped me at once and in a few days my troubles were relieved. My kidneys are now doing their work properly and I have no aches or pains."

COMPENSATION LAW IN WEST VIRGINIA IS MEETING FAVOR

Operators Quick to Take Advantage of New Legislation.

BIG THING FOR THE EMPLOYEES

Cash to Widow in Case of Death, and Payments to Themselves When Sick or Injured Assured Without Recourse to Expensive Lawyers.

West Virginia's Public Service Commission reports that 302 coal mining companies, employing 62,661 men, or more than three-fourths of the coal mine employees in the state, with monthly pay-rolls aggregating $3,293,303, having filed notice of their intention to take advantage of the workmen's compensation law enacted at the last session of the legislature.

This law was framed with the idea of affording workmen in all industries reliable life and accident insurance at the lowest possible cost. The fact that the coal operators worked hard for this law, and that they have been prompt to put its provisions into effect, indicates a practical interest in the welfare of their employees.

Any miner employed by a company that has taken advantage of the law who is injured after October 1 may now be sure that he and his family will be provided for. The state will collect the money and turn it over to the beneficiary with the least possible trouble and delay and at the lowest possible cost.

Under the law the Public Service Commission fixes the rate of assessment on employers not to exceed $1 for each $100 of the pay roll. The employer pays 90 per cent and the employee 10 per cent of this assessment. In case of injury the employee receives half pay, but not more than $8 or less than $1 a week while unable to work, and not more than $150 for medical, nurse and hospital service. If he is killed the state pays his funeral expenses, not to exceed $75, out of the fund. In addition his widow gets a pension of $20 a month until she dies or marries again, and each child gets $5 a month until it attains the age at which it can be lawfully employed. If there is no widow nor child under age other dependents may receive not more than $20 a month for six years. Benefits are made exempt from all claims of creditors and from any attachment or execution.
